SOC*4200*02, Advanced Topics in Criminal Justice
Instructor: Meghan Wrathall

This course provides students with a conceptual and empirical overview of crime and violence in rural and regional communities. Contemporary issues of rural criminology are explored, including rural policing; farm and environmental crime; family violence; and rural drug use; amongst others. This course explicitly explores how crime and criminality are shaped by cultural and locational contexts. Importantly, the course examines rural crime in Canada and internationally through a critical lens.
